GOSLING - GREENWOOD WEDDING

Knox Presbyterian Church, Bassano, was the setting for the recent wedding ceremony which united in marriage Miss Frances Kay Greenwood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Greenwood of Bassano, and Mr. Albert Richard Gosling, son of Mr. and Mrs. S.E. Gosling of Bassano. Rev. Dr. Clare officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length gown of lace over taffeta. Her fingertip veil was held in place by a lace cap, trimmed with pearl and rhinestones. She carried a cascade bouquet of sweetheart roses. Her only jewelry was an Alaska black diamond necklace and earrings, a gift of the bridegroom.

Miss Margaret Simpson was bridesmaid. She wore a shell pink ballerina length gown of flocked nylon and net over taffeta with matching headdress and carried a cascade bouquet of pink carnations.

The flower girl, Miss Cherly Greenwood, sister of the bride, wore a gown of blue lace over pink taffeta. Her headdress was a band of pink roses. Ring bearer was Mr. Lawrence Gosling, nephew of the bridegroom.

Mr. Alexander Biko was best man and Mr. Leonard Greenwood, brother of the bride, was usher.

Mr. J. Ratzlaff sang "Because" and "I'll Walk Beside You", accompanied by Mrs. Brent.

At the reception at the Imperial Coffee Shop, the toast to the bride was proposed by Rev. Clare.

The bride's going away ensemble was a blue flannel suit with matching accessories.

Following the honeymoon trip to Banff, Mr. and Mrs. A.R. Gosling will reside in Bassano.

Much more research needed trace causes heart ailments

"Diseases of the heart alone are responsible for one-third of all deaths in Canada," states Dr. Carl Burton, of the Ontario Heart Foundation and the University of Toronto, in an article written specially for the current issue of Health Magazine, official publication of the Health League of Canada.

Strictly Fresh

"Radioactivity" is nothing unique to the Atomic Age. Our neighbor has a radio that's been active day and night for years and years.

Next time you think that your job is nothing but a daily grind, consider the poor dentist.

Fellow sporting a Van Dyke is trapped in an enclosure surrounded by high walls. How does he get out? Whisks out by a whisker, says the fellow across the desk from us. (Some days are worse than others when it comes to dreaming up this column).

One of the employees who was refused a raise recently says that an executive is a person with "no-how."

Floating islands

What to do about a couple of floating islands in Kettle Moraine lake puzzled conservation authorities and the owners of cottages in the area of Dundee, Wisconsin.

It all started with recent heavy rains that filled the 250-acre lake, located in the heart of Kettle Moraine State Forest, to an all-time high.

Residents of the area were surprised to find that an island, about 150 feet long and 60 feet wide, had been pushed half a mile by high winds to the south shore where it nudged up to the land in front of eight summer homes.

Then the wind shifted. So did the island. The amphibious isle was blown across the lake and came to rest on the swimming beach in front of a resort. Another smaller island got into the act, broke loose from its accustomed location and shifted to the shore line.

The larger of the two floating islands is covered with tall heavy brush and nine or 10 tamarack trees, one reaching a height of 25 feet.

Cardiovascular diseases kill approximately three times as many people as cancer, six times as many as accidents, and seven times as many as pneumonia and influenza.

"It is estimated that there are 500,000 persons throughout Canada at present with disease of the heart or blood vessels in some form or another," says Dr. Burton. "The huge economic loss to the country becomes apparent in terms of loss of life, absenteeism, disability with resultant loss of gainful employment, and cost of care and treatment."

Great need for funds

The great need for funds to conduct research and to attract and keep our best men in these fruitful lines of work became apparent to the section of cardiology of the Ontario Medical Association in 1948, from which a committee on cardiology was formed under the chairmanship of Dr. John Keith. The efforts of this committee resulted in the incorporation of the Ontario Heart Foundation in 1952.

Since its inception the Ontario Heart Foundation has had a close liaison with the purely professional Canadian Heart Association, and members of the latter from elsewhere in Canada are organizing similar heart foundations in British Columbia, the Prairie provinces and Quebec, and it is hoped that the Atlantic provinces may follow suit.

At a recent meeting in Ottawa of cardiologists from across Canada called by the minister of National Health and Welfare, a resolution was passed to establish a Canadian Heart Foundation to coordinate the efforts of the Provincial Heart Foundations in carrying out their objectives.

"We are looking forward to a great future as we attempt to discover the various causes of cardiovascular diseases and thus lead to improved methods of prevention and treatment. In spite of a belated start, we, of the Ontario Heart Foundation, are confident of the ultimate success of a countrywide effort to conquer the nation's leading killer," Dr. Burton declared.

Hundred tons at one bite

The world's biggest power shovel, 16 storeys high and capable of gulping nearly 100 tons of earth at one bite, has been put in operation. This is the gee-whizziest piece of machinery we've heard about recently.

It is said that the shovel "could lift a platform containing 166 automobiles, 100 feet in the air, swing them the distance of a football field, set them down on top of a 10-storey building, and swing back for another load—in 45 seconds. That seems like kind of a useless procedure, because what would you do with 166 automobiles on top of a 10-storey building? But it's an impressive picture.

Just the same, the shovel we have in mind these days is a little hand-operated model hanging out in the garage. Soon we're going to use it to spade up a plot for vegetables in the backyard. It won't handle 100 tons in one bite of course. But that's all right; there aren't 100 tons of dirt in our vegetable plot, anyway.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Stuttering said personality defect rather than defect of speech

Stuttering is a personality defect rather than a speech defect, and treatment must be aimed at the underlying emotional difficulties, according to a release from the American Medical Association received by the Health League of Canada.

Dr. Smiley Blanton, of the American Foundation of Religion and Psychiatry, says that there are three functions of speech: expressing emotions, adjusting to other people, and expressing ideas.

Stuttering is a blocking of a person's ability to adjust to other people, arising from anxiety in meeting various social situations. Stutterers usually talk to themselves, to animals, and often to people with whom they are friendly, but not in situations where fear and anxiety are aroused, he said.

Studies have been made to show that there is some organic cause of stuttering, but no positive evidence has been found that nervous or physical deformities cause stuttering, except in occasional cases. Another theory offered, but not accepted by most investigators, is that stuttering springs from making a left-handed child write with the right hand.

Dr. Blanton pointed out that

Meets brother for first time in 43 years

Hyman Schwartz, 66, of Montreal, met his brother in Milwaukee recently—for the first time since they were separated in Russia 43 years ago.

And he has a chance meeting on a Florida vacation last year to thank for the re-union.

Schwartz was sunning himself on a beach when he fell into casual conversation with another holiday-maker, Ben Schnoll, of Milwaukee.

Schnoll mentioned his in-laws, by the name of Pearlman, and Schwartz said, that used to be his name, until he changed it a few years ago.

Schnoll asked a few more questions, and when he got back to Milwaukee checked up with his brother-in-law, Max Pearlman, 53. To his delight he found that the two men were brothers.

A visit was arranged, and Schwartz set off for Milwaukee, to be met by his long-lost brother — and by a happy Schnoll, still nodding his head in disbelief at the reunion he had brought about by a million-to-one chance.

These days most people work under pressure, worry more, sleep less. This strain on body and brain makes physical fitness easier to lose—harder to regain. Today's tense living, lowered resistance, overwork, worry—any of these may affect normal kidney action. When kidneys get out of order, excess acids and wastes remain in the system. Then backache, disturbed rest, that "tired-out" heavy-headed feeling often follow. That's the time to take Dodd's Kidney Pills. Dodd's stimulate the kidneys to normal action. Then you feel better—sleep better—work better. Ask for Dodd's Kidney Pills at any drug counter.

According to the "News Bulletin" the British and Foreign Bible Society held its annual meeting on May 2nd in London, England with the Right Rev. Dr. Clifford Martin, Lord Bishop of Liverpool as Chairman.

The General Secretary, Dr. W.J. Platt, stated that in 1955 the Society distributed around the world 7,380,000 Bibles, Testaments and Scripture portions. Since 1939 it has produced 50 million volumes, including 14 million whole Bibles and an equal number of complete New Testaments.

During the past year new Bible Houses were completed in Cyprus, the Sudan and New Guinea. In the area of the Orange Free State, where gold was discovered three years ago, the Bible Society has established a depot and last year distributed Scriptures in 86 different languages.

While there is no longer a direct link with the Bible Society of China, word has come that a limited but good edition of the Bible was published in Shanghai last year. In November 1955 the Society was permitted by the Russian authorities to make a gift to the Evangelical Church in Russia of printing plates for the production of Bibles. These plates were delivered to the Russian Embassy in London for transmission to Moscow without charge to the Society. A cable was received recently to acknowledge their safe arrival.

In reporting on a tour of Bible Society work in South America, General Secretary Dr. N.J. Cockburn announced that over 5,000,000 volumes of the Holy Scriptures were distributed in that continent last year. Most of these were in Spanish and Portuguese but the Society has also issued Scriptures in some 26 languages for Indian tribes. Needs of immigrants from Europe and Asia were also met - there are 700,000 Japanese in the Amazon valley alone.

The Translation Department co-operated with missionaries at work in no less than 233 languages - 53 of which do not possess a single Gospel, in 59 - Scriptures are being revised and in 121 others the amount already published is to be expanded.

The Society's income in 1955 was over three million dollars. Not quite half of that amount came from the proceeds of sales of Scriptures, the rest was received in contributions from England, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and other countries. Without this $1,500,000 it would be impossible to carry on the work of translation, production and distribution which must be done if the Holy Scriptures are to be provided for every man in his own tongue.

From the above report it will be easily realized that the Holy Bible is still the world's best seller; in fact the volume of total sales of the Bible for any year is equal to the total sales of the next 10 most popular books combined.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY — radio queen

—By WILLIS LINDQUIST

IT WAS a bright moon in Sheridan Park and as usual the fat little man was feeding pigeons by the fountain. Alex found the sight reassuring. Out of habit he sat down on the shaded bench, which Tally had called "our bench." She had chosen it herself because she liked to be near the fountain and the birds and exchange pleasantries with the pigeon man.

The pigeon man suddenly discovered him. He tipped his bowler in that funny way and came waddling over, paddling the air with his arms. He was Tally's friend and Alex managed a polite smile.

"Well, now!" beamed the old man. "It's good to see you after all these weeks, young man." His eyes sharpened on the suitcase. "Going away?"

"Chicago," Alex said grimly. He didn't bother to add that he was going to look for a job. Not that he needed a job. Chicago was a strange place where he could forget. The trip would take most of the money he had saved for the time when he and Tally would get married.

The pigeon man joined him on the bench. "You broke off with that nice little girl, didn't you?"

"Something like that," Alex stared at the pigeons that were gathering about them. He knew suddenly why he had come to the park. There were memories here. He could feel close to Tally, talk with someone who had known and liked her.

"Doesn't seem right," the pigeon man sighed. "Never a cross word between you, except those first few days when she brought her lunch. You wouldn't have it."

Even that seemed a pleasant memory now. There was so little to get excited about, and he had made so much of it.

"We were both working in a stockroom then," Alex explained. "She wanted to save money by bringing our lunch. I had to make her understand that — well, you know how cheap it would look to some of the others."

The pigeon man nodded. There was a flutter of wings in the sun and he took a cracker from a bag. He munched on it thoughtfully. "That was many months ago," he said, hanging a jumbo-sized question mark in the air.

"Yes," Alex remarked dryly. "She struck it pretty sweet on the radio, singing. That did something to her. She's changed. You wouldn't know her."

"Indeed?" the Pigeon man cleared his throat. "As a member of the bar, I've learned to judge people. Your Tally seemed very genuine to me."

Alex was tempted to ask what bar. The pigeon man frequently posed as a doctor before the mothers of infants, and as a retired circus performer for the benefit of small boys.

"She was always so — so sweet and honest, so much like a small kid," Alex said. He licked his dry lips. "That's all gone now. She seems to have nothing to say to me. We've got nothing in common. She's living in another world where all our plans must look pretty silly to her. She's got too much money. That's what it is."

"Giving you the brush-off, eh?" Alex scowled. "She looks plenty smart in her new clothes and she knows it. I tried everything; flowers, the best shows, dinners. None of it means a thing. I'm still just a guy working in a stockroom at forty a week."

The pigeon man fanned himself with his bowler. "So now you're going away."

"I'll start over again. At Wharton's they think I'm going on a vacation. They all think Tally is coming along, that we're going away to get married." He gave an ironic grunt. "What a laugh that is! I hardly see her any more. She's always too busy. Maybe she's stepping out with some big shot. I wouldn't know."

"You told her you were leaving?"

"I did not. I'm through crawling."

The faded eyes studied him. "What if something happened to her voice? She'd be fired. How would it be then?"

Alex's big-knuckled hands clasped and unclasped, and he looked at them as if they were pieces of a puzzle that should fit together. "But didn't. 'Maybe everything would be the same again.'"

"My view exactly!" The pigeon man's twinkled. "I think you ought to see her before you leave. She's down in the grotto right now. Goes there every day."

"Tally?" Alex blinked. Then suddenly he was moving. In his haste, he forgot his suitcase. The thought of Tally coming to the park every day was ridiculous. But he had to make sure.

He stared for a long incredulous moment. Tally was there, golden headed and beautiful. She was on the bench near the waterfall. And she eating lunch!

She caught her breath at the sight of him. She seemed suddenly frightened, her eyes fixed upon him with strange intensity. Then the moment passed. Color came into her cheeks and she folded her hands in sudden resignation.

"Well, now you know," she looked down at the water splashing on the rocks. "You never gave me a chance to explain about the radio job. Before I could reach the stockroom you had told everyone. They were all treating me like a radio queen. You were making so much of it. You were so proud I didn't dare say anything."

COUTURIER DESIGNED—Smartly original this brown suit designed by Marie France of Montreal has a huge collar high around the throat and a novel back panel on the jacket.

PREFERRED PETS

It wasn't only that Frederick J. Betts of Denver, had to share his home with 11 chinchillas, a parrot, a cat, a dog and three large bowls of tropical fish. It was also, he told a jury in seeking a divorce, that his wife, Anonia, reminded him repeatedly that she preferred the animals, bird and fish to him. The jury agreed, and granted Betts a divorce.

Alex sank slowly onto the bench. "What was there to tell?" "It's only a small unimportant job. It doesn't pay much money, but it was a start."

"You could have told me later."

She shook her head disconsolately. "I was trying to get up courage. Then I had to buy new clothes so I wouldn't be so conspicuous. It took all the money I had saved — our money. It — it was like stealing. I hate myself so. I couldn't bear the thought of you spending all that money on me. It got to the point where I couldn't stand the sight of you. I kept hoping they'd soon give me a good singing contract. Then you'd have a right to be proud. I could tell you the truth."

Alex took her in his arms, buried his face in her hair. "With a voice like yours, baby, you can't miss."

He held her close for a long time, until a tremulous smile came back to her lips. "I should take you to a big dinner for that, but I guess we'd just better keep saving."

Her smile broadened as he found an apple in the paper sack. He popped his teeth into it. And the juice ran down his chin. 3197

Obesity study shows prevention should commence with children

Nutritionists with the Agricultural Research Service in Washington have been advised that fat prevention should begin with children.

Dr. Charlotte Young of the New York State (Cornell) Experiment Station, in reporting on a study made of 168 obese patients, says it seems less important in prescribing for a patient to know how long he or she has been fat than to know when the person first started getting that way.

Correction of bad eating habits and the obese outlook on life is called relatively easy with those who gained their unwanted poundage in adulthood and almost impossible with those who became obese as children. Only one-tenth of Dr. Young's patients—all referred to the clinic by physicians and given every conceivable help in the way of diets, counselling and medical supervision—managed to get down to an ideal weight.

Obese from childhood

A fourth were reasonably successful. Half had some success and enjoyed improved health from the experiment. But the others simply floundered, losing a little this week and gaining it back the next.

Most of the difficult ones had been obese from childhood, it was demonstrated.

Dr. Young suggests that meals "like mother used to make" are simply not required any more for the vast majority of more or less sedentary citybred persons and that nutrition education is a matter of increasing urgency.

Meals streamlined in calories, but with adequate mineral and energy content, combined with a regular daily program of physical activity and exercise, seem to be called for with many of today's urban families.

If mother gets fat, her youngsters may also, not because they inherit the fat, but because they inherit her indolence. She doesn't get around very fast and they, being imitative as monkeys, don't either.

Dr. Young's patients all were excessively obese and most complained of a variety of aches and pains. All—even the flounders—did show some degree of improvement in their general health after six months of diet and weekly counselling.

"SUCCESS"

I hold no dream of fortunes vast,
Nor seek undying fame,
I do not ask when life is past
That many know my name.

I may not own the skill to rise
To glory's topmost height,
Nor win a place among the wise,
But I can keep the right.

And I can live my life on earth
Contented to the end,
If but a few shall know my worth
And proudly call me friend.

If we noticed little pleasures
As we notice little pains;
If we quite forgot our losses

And their faults refused to see,
What a comfortable, happy,
Cheerful place this world would be!

World Happenings In Pictures

FISH STORY—No one made a birdie but the fish sure were nibbling at the Metropolitan Beach golf course, near Mount Clemens, Mich. Ivan Sayers, left, and James Kraft display fish found in a sand trap near the 11th green after gale-lashed waters of Lake St. Clair swept ashore, washing ashore hundreds of carp.

WHAT LEISURE? Fred Dwyer, holder of the American record for the 2,000-meter track event, models leisure-time outfit for male members of the United States Olympic Team competing at Melbourne, Australia, this year. It features Bermuda shorts in gray flannel, knee-length wool hose, white short-sleeved sports shirt, white wool sweater with Olympic colors at neckline. Garb was modeled in New York City.

VISITING CANADA—Maj.-Gen. J. P. E. Bernatchez, left, general officer commanding Quebec Command, greets Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery at Montreal, where the distinguished soldier arrived from Britain to begin a three-week informal visit to Canada.

REUNITED WITH SON—Mrs. Amina Hamilton embraces her son Maurice as she is reunited with him in Wayne County Jail, near Detroit. Mrs. Hamilton and her husband made the 10,000-mile trip from their native Baghdad to be with their son when he goes on trial for the slaying of a Detroit grocer. Maurice was a student at the time of the slaying and had been in the United States only a few months.

FRIENDLY PEEK—Skyline of lower Manhattan as seen through a submarine's periscope provides spine-chilling food for thought: What if it were being seen by an enemy submarine commander? The camera took this friendly peek at New York City from control room of the nation's first atomic submarine, USS Nautilus, as she visited New York harbor for the first time. Deadliest sub in the world was surfaced at time picture was taken.

POGONOTOMIST: Eve Nell, 24, beards the men on a personal problem heretofore considered purely in the male domain. She's a "pogonotomist"—an expert on the subject of chopping off whiskers. Employed by a razor manufacturer, she does a tidy business in giving lectures before groups whose members have long since ceased being little shavers.

COOKIN' WITH STEAM—Vapor seeps from launching slot of a steam-propelled catapult as a Vickers Supermarine N-113 twin jet warms up aboard Britain's atom-age carrier, HMS Ark Royal.
